

Upcoming SIG Meetings

Jenni Jones of Amazon Web Services (AWS), the Academic Programs SIG Chair, invites you to attend an overview of the ServiceNow Academic Program presented by Faez Ahmed on Tuesday 17th March at 11 am-12 pm Eastern, 8-9 am Pacific (note earlier time).

Generating alternative pipelines of in-demand entry-level talent is becoming an increasing focus for many companies. The ServiceNow Academic Program accelerates student transition from school to work with applicable real-world experience, both inside and outside the classroom. The various program options incorporate practical simulations, while building collaboration, communication, and problem-solving skills vital to the modern workforce.

Join the Learning Technology (LT) SIG's upcoming discussion on "Content Development Tools", March 20 from 12-1pm EST. Members from the LT SIG will share their experiences with Content Development tools (pros/cons) as we look to learn more about how various technologies are being used across CEEdMA.

If you're wondering why a guest speaker isn't listed for this session, Mike's a bit worried too. The LT SIG group has gone rogue. It has adopted a new format of eliminating a single speaker. It has committed to reducing its use of PowerPoint and is even asking volunteers to "turn on" their cameras to get to know one another. It's a little crazy.

The moderator, Cynthia Stegall from Software AG, opens the meeting, shares her own experience on the topic and then asks for volunteers to do the same. Members are able to informally discuss their experiences with various tools, giving others a chance to ask questions, provide feedback, collect ideas, and so on. And at the end of the session, the group votes on the topic for next month.

The new format received high marks from the February attendees, including those who were brave enough to turn on their cameras. So be BOLD, try something NEW and come check us out! We'd love to see you there!
